Artisan - Crafter (ISTP)

Introduction

In a world filled with unique individuals, when it comes to personality there are only four different temperaments and 16 types of people. Understanding these personality types and mastering your own can be the keys to achieving your goals.

Your temperament is the Artisan (SP). There are many SPs, perhaps 30 to 35 percent of the population, which is good, because you create much of the beauty, grace, fun, and excitement the rest of us enjoy in life. Your particular personality type, the Crafter (ISTP), makes up about 7-8% of the total population.

About Your Artisan Temperament

There are four types of Artisans (SPs): Performers, Composers, Promoters, and Crafters. These four personality types share several core characteristics. Firstly, Artisans are fun loving, optimistic people focused on the here-and-now. MORE >>

About Your Artisan Temperament

Artisans are typically bold, spontaneous individuals who trust their impulses to lead them forward into life's adventures. Members of this group don't simply want to walk through the world. They want to make a real splash. As a result, Artisans are typically pretty memorable people. Excitable and often unconventional, Artisans seek out the stimulation of new experiences more than others do. They want to try - and even master - the great variety of activities that life has to offer. In their personal lives, upbeat, curious natures can make Artisans playful mates and creative parents. Professionally, their combination of realism and risk-taking can make these individuals troubleshooting leaders. Overall, Artisans prize the kind of freedom that allows them to live for the moment and seize the day.

Being a Crafter (ISTP)

In a sense, Crafters don't work with their chosen tools so much as they play with them. In your own life this may mean that your free time finds you tinkering with home improvement projects, working on your car, or doing crafts from knitting to woodworking. Rather than schedule this personal time, you're more apt to start new projects on impulse. Like all the Artisans, Crafters are people who love to keep moving. Your type seems to know instinctively that most activities are more enjoyable, and sometimes more effective, if done spontaneously.

You can thrive on excitement, particularly the rush of speed. Racing, water-skiing, and surfing -- these are the kinds of activities that tend to appeal to you. Of all sixteen types, Crafters are most likely to be risk takers, pitting themselves, or their techniques, against chance or the odds. By being more fearless than most in your leisure time activities, you may sometimes expose yourself to dangerous situations or the potential for injury. You may want to try to keep a balance between exhilaration and sensibility.

Because you'll often communicate through action rather than words, you can be hard to get to know. At times when you've lacked expressiveness, you may have found yourself a bit isolated, especially at school or on the job. Socially, however, this really isn't a problem. Mostly, because you'll tend to surround yourself with people who enjoy one another through shared experiences. Ordinarily it will be the great things you do with your friends, rather than the great talks you've had together, that you'll value most.

Crafters can be wonderfully generous and loyal to your friends, teammates, and sidekicks. You may even give up your nights and weekends to help the people you care about with everything from building projects to simple home repairs. However this pliant and easygoing nature doesn't spill over to all areas of your life. In fact, you can be fiercely insubordinate to those in authority, especially when you see their rules as unnecessarily confining. But rather than go against regulations in an openly defiant manner, you're more apt to quietly ignore them. More than anything, you may simply want the freedom to do your own thing. You're the kind who is proud of your abilities and wants to be able to express them at will.

Work and Career

Your mastery of the tools of your trade allows you to do things many other people would find risky or difficult. So if your work involves handling anything from a scalpel or gun, to an electric saw or piece of athletic equipment, you're apt to do so with skill and grace. Although you appreciate a sense of order, one that makes otherwise risky activities safe for you, you have little tolerance for routine. Crafters like you tend to impulsively break out of the arbitrary confines of traditional workplaces.

Like other Artisan professionals, you're wired to seize freedom and spontaneity in your work. You can hunger for the liberty to play, create, and act on your impulses. As a result, Artisans like you typically thrive in "action" occupations -- those that involve precision, endurance, strength, boldness, and timing.

At Work with the Four Temperaments

At Work with Artisans: Artisans (SPs) are wired to seize freedom and spontaneity. They hunger for the liberty to act on their impulses, to play, and to create. They make up about 35% of the population.

In business, Artisans are crisis managers and troubleshooters. They can be expert at solving problems and doing what is necessary, whether they are expressly permitted to or not. They are practical, resourceful, flexible, and risk-taking individuals. Coworkers are apt to enjoy their creativity and verbal wit, but may perceive Artisans as indecisive or even as troublemakers.

At Work with Guardians: Guardians (SJs) are wired to seek belonging to a group or community. They often stabilize relationships and institutions through their responsible, conventional behavior. They make up about 40-45% of the population.

At work, Guardians tend to be administrators and managers. They can be expert at doing what needs to be done, and in the manner it must be done. They are dependable, accountable, realistic, and service-oriented. Coworkers likely appreciate their desire to belong and contribute, but may perceive Guardians as being either slave drivers or sticks-in-the-mud.

At Work with Rationals: Rationals (NTs) are wired to acquire competence and intelligence. Ordinarily, they strive to learn, know, predict, and control the resources and ideas in their environment. They make up less than 10% of the population.

In the workplace, Rationals are often the researchers and strategists. They can be expert at conceptualizing and seeing the big picture, as well as architecting and implementing the necessary systems. They are logical, precise independent individuals who usually are responsive to new ideas. Coworkers often appreciate their ingenuity and competence, but may perceive Rationals as being impersonal and not good with follow-through.

At Work with Idealists: Idealists (NFs) are wired to pursue personal growth, authenticity, and integrity. They can yearn both to develop fully as individuals and to facilitate growth in others. Idealists make up little more than 15% of the population.

In work environments, Idealists are usually positive, helpful, and people-oriented. They can be expert at dealing with the human resource concerns of an organization, whether these issues are part of their job description or not. Idealists are warm, idealistic, caring individuals. Coworkers are apt to appreciate their authenticity and loyalty to the human side of the business, but may perceive Idealists as not being effective enough or even of being flaky.

Tips to Help You Find the Right Workplace

- Seek out a place where your talents can be used effectively, without too many rules or conventions getting in the way.
- Some structured environments where competition and action are abundant (e.g., military, law enforcement) can provide the variety and opportunity desired for some Artisans.
- Be wary of jobs that pay well but are not challenging. If the work is not enjoyable, then search for alternatives.
- Don't underestimate the value of life experience you picked up beyond the parameters of formal schooling or paid work.

For Artisans, satisfaction in the workplace seems to be driven by flexible hours, challenging work, altruistic service, and a little bit by social opportunities like company-sponsored beer on Fridays. However other perks like stock options or being able to bring pets to work didn't appear to have much of an effect. Artisans usually work for the process of working in itself, rather than focusing toward a particular end. As a result, Artisans can become bored with routine and be quick to try new things. This trend becomes evident when looking at the very wide range of jobs that Artisans take on. Particular career choice doesn't appear to be as important for Artisans as the ability to try out new skills and roles.

Love and Relationships

What Crafters like you often seek in your relationships is a sense of shared adventure, spontaneously exciting interactions, and enough personal space for you to retain some of your independence. You have a sly sense of humor and are likely to enjoy teasing your partner. You are likely to look for a mate who can manage social obligations while you fix things, whether it be cars, plumbing, or computers. For a romantic partner, you may look for people who are somewhat different from you. As a result, more verbal types who can easily and clearly state what is on their minds or in their hearts can be quite attractive to you. During the early stages of your relationships, these differences are likely to be especially endearing and fun.

About You

You are less likely than other Artisans to make big scenes. You're more likely to withdraw and ignore your partner. Since you tend to be sparing with words, and since you're probably good at working with your hands, you are likely to show your love by what you do, rather than by what you say. You might do repairs, remodel a home, or do some other task to help your mate.

You have probably enjoyed watching other people playing the dating game, and the idiocies others resort to when dating. In the dating scene, you are likely to have scanned available prospects, found someone who looked good, and waited until the right moment to move in. Using minimal effort for maximum results fits your style.

One difficulty you may have in a relationship is your desire for independence and time alone. This can cause your mate to wonder if they really have a partner. If they start pushing for you to prove your love, you may push back to preserve your freedom which could turn into a vicious cycle. Sometimes this can be solved by arranging some regularly scheduled couple time. Your partner is much more likely to believe your love when you periodically put aside your own interests and show that your relationship is a priority with you.

One aspect about you that may cause your partner problems is your tendency to guard words as though you have to pay for each one you speak. You may wish to observe others or read up to find some ways of verbalizing your more tender feelings which don't sound completely unnatural. While silence is golden, a good word spoken at the right time puts life in the relationship.

About Your Partner

If Your Partner is an Artisan

Artisan (SP)/Artisan (SP): Artisan/Artisan pairings are likely to be full of fun and excitement, as both partners are likely to have many interests and activities in common. Like playmates, such a couple can truly explore the pleasures of life. However, problems may occur if their fast-paced ways may cause them to either exhaust one another or simply lose interest. If both are Artisans, they are likely to have fairly similar views on romance, showing love, and jealousy. However, one thing that can cause jealousy is if one partner becomes too insistent upon being a game-player about love and continually focuses on other love objects in order to stimulate the partner's jealousy to cause excitement. The other partner can retaliate or pull away. For the relationship to succeed, both will need to have some similar areas to adventure in plus other areas where the partner allows them freedom.

What Artisans find romantic on a date: There are two kinds of dates Artisans tend to like. One is an extravagant meal at a place with a fantastic view. Another is doing some sort of physical activity, such as a sport, hiking, or a board game that includes some competition and physical contact.

What Artisans look for when dating: When Artisans are dating, they tend to look for a calm, practical person to provide them stability. Sexual chemistry is very important as well. Once the relationship becomes established, they want their partner to liven up and quit being so serious.

What makes Artisans jealous: Infidelity, such as touching someone else inappropriately will make them very jealous. Another thing that makes Artisans jealous is if the partner gives gifts to others or makes an extravagant gesture for someone else.

How Artisans show jealousy: Artisans are the mostly likely temperament to react physically, such as throwing the partner's belongings out, etc. If their partner starts cheating, they may cheat too. They may either compete to win their mate back or give their partner the cold shoulder.

How Artisans like to be romantic: Artisans like to be romantic with "Big Gestures" - something unexpected and high style. Other ways they are romantic is with teasing and active flirting involving physical contact. They love sensual or exciting times, such as fine dining, gaming, or risky adventures.

How Artisans show their love: Artisans show their love with regular physical affection including kisses, back rubs, and hugs. They also like to give gifts. They give gifts at all times of the year, and the gifts tend to be things that are not necessary but add spice to life. They like to give loved ones nicknames.

How Artisans like to be loved: One thing Artisans often appreciate is a surprise, such as leaving for a weekend getaway on a moment's notice. They like to know that their partner has been thinking about them, so gifts (even small ones) at non-traditional times are usually appreciated. They are generally very sensual and enjoy touching games.

If Your Partner is a Guardian

Artisan (SP)/Guardian (SJ): Artisan/Guardian pairings are complementary relationships where the partners' natural tendencies can balance one another nicely. For Artisans, a responsible, concerned Guardian can seem like a real Rock of Gibraltar to ground themselves to. Guardians may rely upon Artisans to add spice to their life and to demand that they occasionally free themselves from the constraints of responsibility that they place upon themselves. However these couples don't always see eye to eye on money matters with Artisans wanting the excitement of a grand gesture and Guardians desiring practicality and savings for the future. For the relationship to succeed it is necessary that they retain tolerance and goodwill on both sides and appreciate the skills each brings to the pairing.

What Guardians find romantic on a date: Guardians like to be able to see that the other person has planned ahead to make the event special. They usually like to dress up for a formal event and enjoy traditions, particularly traditions that have been created together as a couple, such as 'our song.'

What Guardians look for when dating: When Guardians are dating, they tend to look for a person who can provide fun, games, and spontaneity to balance their serious, hard-working nature. They like when their date takes risks on their behalf. After the relationship has become established, they want their partner to settle down and grow up.

What makes Guardians jealous: What is most likely to make Guardians jealous is infidelity, especially if it is done publicly so they lose face. Another thing that can make them jealous is a partner who spends what they consider to be an unacceptably large amount of money on someone or something else.

How Guardians show jealousy: A Guardian's first response is usually to try to guilt their partner into toeing the line. Other tactics include a constant monitoring of the partner's behavior, tearful pleadings, and loud demands. They may involve others to try to coerce the partner into right behavior.

How Guardians like to be romantic: Guardians typically like traditional romantic gestures, such as flowers, chocolates, lingerie, jewelry, and mild flirting. They are especially likely to keep mementos of the times with the loved one, such as programs, ticket stubs, and pressed flowers.

How Guardians show their love: Guardians show love by taking care of annoying details, planning for the future security of loved ones, organizing things to make them easier to use, and buying gifts. They also often like to give loved ones nicknames. They are the most likely temperament to show love by serving their partner.

How Guardians like to be loved: Guardians feel loved when their partner does a task they've been avoiding. They love gifts, but the amount of money spent is very important. It needs to be enough to show that they are valued highly but not so much that they feel resources are being wasted. Guardians feel loved when their partner willingly participates in traditions.

If Your Partner is a Idealist

Artisan (SP)/Idealist (NF): Artisan/Idealist pairings are likely to be imaginative romps, marked by freedom, spontaneity, and sensual pleasures. The Artisans can enjoy the Idealists' sensitivity and empathy for others and their deep interest in their partner's success. The Idealists can find that the Artisans' need for action, stimulates them to participate more fully in the "now." Idealists may focus on the self-realization of themselves and their partners to the extent that they cease to participate in the Artisans' spontaneous adventures, while the Artisans, who have little patience for exploring their inner lives, push more and more towards having adrenaline highs. For the relationship to succeed, both will need to find areas that don't involve each other: Artisans in areas to express their freedom, and Idealists in areas for self-development.

What Idealists find romantic on a date: Romantic settings, romantic foods, romantic things to do are all fun, but they aren't the main thing for Idealists. Idealists want the total attention of their partner and lots of eye contact. They want reciprocity in sharing.

What Idealists look for when dating: Idealists often look for someone who seems stable emotionally. Once the relationship is established, they want their partner to become more sensitive. Idealists view dating as a time to explore the compatibility of each other's view and to see if the lightning bolt hits saying, "This is THE ONE."

What makes Idealists jealous: Emotional infidelity makes Idealists jealous. Emotional infidelity can be seen as an emotional withdrawal, or it can be when the partner becomes emotionally attached to another person, idea or activity.

How Idealists show jealousy: The most common way Idealists show jealousy is with pleading and tears. They may beat themselves up and try to be the perfect partner so their mate won't stray. If that doesn't work, they will withdraw emotionally and turn to others.

How Idealists like to be romantic: Idealists are generally the most romantic of the temperaments. They attach romantic meaning to all kinds of ordinary events and things. What they find the most romantic is the exploration of each other's souls.

How Idealists show their love: Idealists show their love by listening and being a cheerleader for their partner. They will regularly affirm their belief in the other person, their abilities, and their innate goodness. Idealists are likely to write encouraging notes and give affection, such as squeezing hands, kisses, hugs, and back rubs.

How Idealists like to be loved: What Idealists want the most is someone to listen to what they have to say and sympathize or empathize without passing judgment or offering advice unless they ask for it. They also feel loved when a partner shares a vulnerability that the partner has which demonstrates that they have earned trust.

If Your Partner is a Rational

Artisan (SP)/Rational (NT): Artisan/Rational pairings can be highly practical and functional partnerships which balance acting in the day-to-day world and dreaming about future possibilities. Indeed, Artisans are often impressed by Rationals' theoretical approach to problems because it is so different from their own view of things. Rationals can enjoy the Artisans' zest for life and their drive towards action and adventure. However, these relationships can become challenging if Artisans become bored with listening to their Rational partners' ideas and theories or if Rationals' calmer, detached ways clash with Artisans' typical focus on excitement and worldly pleasure. For the relationship to succeed, both must find separate arenas to express themselves: Artisans in their need for excitement and Rationals in their need for intellectual stimulation.

What Rationals find romantic on a date: Although some Rationals find a lovely setting and good food to be romantic, what they really desire is a date in which two people spend hours sharing ideas and dreams. Rationals also like a battle of wits and word play, such as double entendres.

What Rationals look for when dating: When Rationals are looking for a partner, they are likely to look for one who can encourage and tame their hidden emotional side. After they have settled in a relationship, they are likely to want their partner to develop a thicker skin and be more emotionally stable.

What makes Rationals jealous: In general, it is very difficult to provoke a Rational to jealousy. They allow their partners a lot of freedom and expect them to justify that trust. However, if the partner looks for intellectual stimulation from others, that may cause jealousy.

How Rationals show jealousy: Rationals are the least likely of the temperaments to show jealousy. They tend to dislike emotional scenes. Often, they can deny jealousy and even be unaware of it. Their reaction is usually to withdraw or show distaste for the person's company without explanation.

How Rationals like to be romantic: Many people see Rationals as being unromantic. Some Rationals see themselves that way as well. However, most of them have a sometimes deeply hidden sentimental or romantic side. They usually need training to express themselves appropriately.

How Rationals show their love: Rationals show love by not holding onto to their partner too tightly. They give their partner lots of freedom to pursue their own ideas and dreams. Another way they show love is by treating their mate as an expert and asking them for advice on something the Rational needs for their latest big idea.

How Rationals like to be loved: Rationals love to be seen as experts and approached for advice. They appreciate partners who listen to their ideas and ask intelligent questions. They want partners who can encourage them and their ideas without being condescending. Rationals also like for their partners to be sensitive to their moods and respond accordingly.

Famous Crafters

Did you know that Michael Jordan and Amelia Earhart are both ISTPs too? It's not so surprising when you think about it. Michael Jordan is the ultimate athletic competitor, known for his almost super-human skill with a basketball. Pilot Amelia Earhart was a true Artisan of flying machines, as well as being a free-spirited, adventurous woman willing to take daring risks.

What Each Letter Means

The pair of letters are E-I, S-N, T-F, and J-P. No single letter should be taken as naming a type of person. For example, there are no "Extraverts" or "Thinkers," as such. A personality is a complex union of traits. These letters merely suggest stronger or weaker tendencies in a person's overall makeup. The pairs of letters stand for the following qualities:

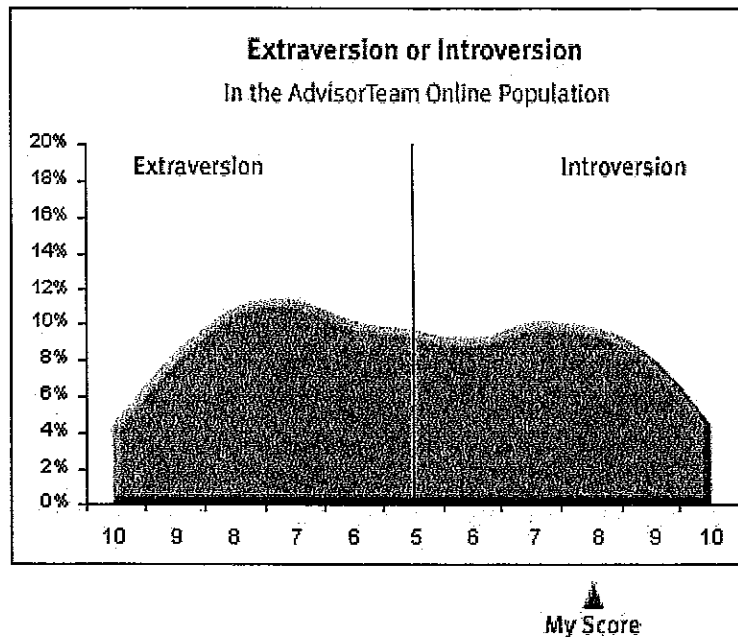

E = Extraversion	I = Introversion
S = Sensation	N = Intuition
T = Thinking	F = Feeling
P = Perception	J = Judgment

The terms Extraversion (E) and Introversion (I) describe two vastly different social styles. People who score high in Extraversion on the Temperament Sorter tend to be gregarious and expressive; those scoring high on Introversion tend to be private and reserved.

People strong in Extraversion are typically more comfortable socializing with groups than being alone. They often report that they're energized by contact with other people. These individuals usually have a large circle of friends and are happy to approach others, even strangers, to talk. For people high in Extraversion, social banter is usually an easy and pleasant thing. Interaction is something that makes them feel alive. As a result, too much quiet and seclusion can actually exhaust such persons. They tend to report feelings of loneliness or power drain when not in contact with others.

On the other hand, people prone to Introversion often seem more comfortable alone than in a crowd. They tend to draw energy from private, solitary activities, including reading, listening to music, and working by themselves on their latest project or favorite hobby. Introverts usually have a few, long-time friends, and can remain in contact with larger groups only so long before their energies are depleted. If their job, family, or social responsibilities require them to be outgoing or take center stage, they can soon become exhausted and need down time in quiet places to rest and recharge their batteries.

Remember, however, that no one is simply an "Extravert" or an "Introvert." These terms are merely end points on the E-I scale, with most everyone falling somewhere in between. Most individuals embody a mixture of these two social styles. Also, different tasks or roles at work or in the family can bring out more Extraversion or Introversion in a person. This dimension of personality, more than the other three, is fluid and situational.

The Sensory/Intuitive (S-N) scale on the Temperament Sorter differentiates between two distinct kinds of human focus. People with high Sensory scores pay more attention to what is going on outside themselves in the world of concrete things; people with high Intuitive scores pay more attention to what is going on inside themselves in the abstract world of ideas.

Sensory people make up the vast majority of the population -- upwards of 85%. These people seem more at home in the material world, where they spend their time looking after the business of everyday living: food and clothing, transportation and shelter, job and family, recreation and social life. With their eye on physical realities, they tend to see all the particulars of what is right in front of them. They typically focus on what's happening in the here-and-now, or what has happened in the past, rather than speculating about future possibilities. These are practical, down-to-earth people who want facts, trust facts, and remember facts. They believe in common sense and usually trust that experience is the best teacher.

In contrast, people who are strongly Intuitive seem more at home in the abstract, conceptual world of ideas. Intuitive types deal in inferences, theories, daydreams, musings, speculations, and symbols -- things that can only be seen with the mind's eye. In fact, because they're so often focused on their internal world, these individuals can sometimes miss a great deal of what's going on around them. For highly Intuitive people, reality is not a solid, present thing, but is more a mental image or a stage of development toward some future ideal. The possible almost always looms large for Intuitive people: whatever "is" can be better. They can be fascinated by hypotheses and potentials. They are also often absorbed by their vivid and complex imaginations. The S-N scale measures the most fundamental of the four dimensions of personality. It's the first cut, so to speak, in evaluating one's type.

However, this delineation doesn't mean that being Intuitive or Sensory is an "either-or" proposition. Intuitive individuals certainly turn outward at times and pay attention to the world at large; they're just far more inclined to become preoccupied with their own ideas. So too, Sensory people do sometimes look inward to ponder and to dream. However, for the most part their flights of imagination lag well behind their real-world observations. Neither type can occupy both worlds at once, and each will usually show a clear preference for one over the other.

The Thinking/Feeling (T-F) scale assesses how people govern themselves and make decisions. Everyone has both thoughts and feelings. However those who score high on Thinking tend to use their head more when making choices, while those scoring high on Feeling tend to follow their hearts.

People falling on the Thinking end of the scale tend to be more comfortable basing their actions on impersonal, objective factors. Thinking people can be critical and exacting, both with themselves and others. They're often convinced only by hard data and sound reasoning. Individuals who scored highly in Thinking tend to be frank and straightforward. They are the kind of people who are usually willing to speak their minds and stick to their guns, even if it causes conflict with others. They're known for being tough-minded in their decisions, preferring to keep emotions and desires out of the process as much as possible. Thinking types do have powerful feelings, but a strong show of emotion can embarrass them. As a result, they'll usually keep their feelings in check rather than appearing to lose self-control, even at the risk of seeming hard-nosed or cold.

In contrast, people on the Feeling end of the scale are typically more comfortable basing their actions on personal, emotional factors. When considering their course, this type will consult their feelings first and will almost always show concern for others. For the most part, these individuals are sympathetic and sentimental. As a result, many times they can be swayed by powerful desire or a touching appeal. Feeling people tend to be softhearted when making decisions. They don't like to hurt anyone's feelings. It's not that Feeling individuals necessarily have more or deeper emotions than those on the Thinking end of the scale. They simply let their feelings show more easily. This tendency makes them seem warmer and friendlier, which in turn can give them an easier time getting along with others.

The Judgment/Perception (J-P) scale measures how people process information and arrange their lives. Those who score high on Judgment tend to make up their mind quickly and commit to schedules, while those scoring high on Perception prefer to keep their options open and their timetables flexible.

People strong in Judgment waste no time forming opinions or drawing conclusions. They often report feeling a sense of urgency until a decision is made, and can rest only after everything is settled. Closure and finality are important to these individuals, as is orderly procedure. As a result, they can be quick to make schedules, agendas, or timetables for themselves and others to follow. People strong in Judgment will establish deadlines and take them seriously, expecting others will do the same. They're usually comfortable with routines and can be willing to do all sorts of maintenance and cleaning up after a task, feeling that these are necessary steps for a job's completion. For this type, neatness counts. They usually feel unhappy or unsettled when their personal space is a mess. Straightening things up is often near the top of their list.

For their part, people given to Perception keep their eyes open to what's around them, gathering information and looking for opportunities and alternatives that might be available. They usually feel no hurry to nail things down or settle on a finished product. Instead, they tend to prefer exploring possibilities. These individuals are often playful and spontaneous in action. Schedules can make them feel hurried and over-controlled; they tend to look upon deadlines as mere reminders to get on with the job. Also, People high in Perception prefer their work to be enjoyable and meaningful. If a task of routine maintenance or clean up falls to them, they may balk at doing it, or may leave it to someone else. Easy-going, even somewhat impulsive, these people are usually quite tolerant of mess. Their personal spaces are often cluttered with an assortment of things they've picked up, used, then dropped and forgotten about.

Frequently Asked Questions

What is temperament?

There are two sides to personality: One is temperament and the other is character. Temperament is a set of inclinations we are born with, while character is a set of habits we acquire as we grow and mature. Character is disposition, developed over a lifetime; temperament is predisposition, hardwired in from birth. Thus, those of the Artisan temperament are predisposed to impulsive action, those of the Guardian temperament to responsible service, those of the Idealist temperament to personal development, and those of the Rational temperament to objective analysis. Each type of person, unless blocked or deflected by an unfavorable environment, will develop the habits of character appropriate to his or her temperament.

Put another way, our brain is a sort of computer that has temperament for its hardware and character for its software. Our hardware is the physical base of our personality, placing on each of us an unmistakable temperament signature, some facets of which can be observed from a very early age. Our software on the other hand, is made up of our individual experience and social environment -- the forces around us that, with time and occasion, give shape to our individual character.

Thus temperament is the inborn form of human nature and character is the emergent form that develops through the interaction of temperament and environment. Personality, your unique personal style, is a combination of the two.

How can the Temperament Sorter help me?

Fundamentally, the Temperament Sorter helps you to do two things: Understand your own temperament, and gain insight to other peoples'. Possessing this valuable knowledge of human nature can have a variety of far-reaching effects on your life.

In the work world, being savvy about your temperament can lead you to a clearer understanding of your natural role and functions within an organization. It can also help you better capitalize on your personal strengths to build your success. By comprehending your coworkers' temperaments and how each temperament relates, you can begin to master your interactions with supervisors and staff. In addition, being able to interpret others' innate styles can help you to meet their implicit expectations, as well as increasing your own leadership abilities.

In your personal life, being knowledgeable about temperament can help you build strong, lasting ties with others. This is true because it aids you in anticipating your loved ones' needs and respecting their different ways of dealing with life. When you are responsive to others, you will naturally be looked upon as dependable, responsible, helpful, and empathetic. These are all wonderful qualities to bring to your personal relationships. In addition, coming to terms with your own temperament and innate tendencies can bring new levels of wisdom and self-knowledge to all of your interactions, as well as identifying how your particular temperament impacts and influences others.
